PREDATOR —VERSUS— WOLVERINE

For centuries, the YAUTJA have hunted the inhabitants of Earth. A sentient, humanoid, extraterrestrial species, they are known for HUNTING other dangerous creatures for honor and sport. Capable of INTERSTELLAR TRAVEL via starships, they come from a planet with an atmosphere similar to that of Earth's, but their TECHNOLOGICAL ADVANCEMENT far outstrips that of humans. Using a combination of this advanced technology, including CLOAKING SYSTEMS and PLASMA CANNONS, and basic weapons, such as spears, blades and nets, the Yautja traditionally claim a trophy from their prey. It takes a remarkable human to outmatch the…

PREDATOR

Born at the end of the nineteenth century, JAMES HOWLETT was forced to leave his home when he began to display MUTANT ABILITIES: keen, animallike senses, retractable bone claws and a healing factor that gives him an unnaturally long life. Adopting the name LOGAN, he wandered the world for years, leaving behind a trail of bloodshed, betrayal and loss. He's been a soldier, a mercenary, an assassin, a spy, and a samurai. Eventually, he became an unwitting test subject in the WEAPON X program, during which his bones were coated in unbreakable ADAMANTIUM.

At one of his lowest points, he met PROFESSOR CHARLES XAVIER, who invited Logan to join his X-MEN—a team of mutants who fight to protect mutants and humans alike. Since then, Logan has been one of Earth's mightiest defenders, the savage super hero known as…

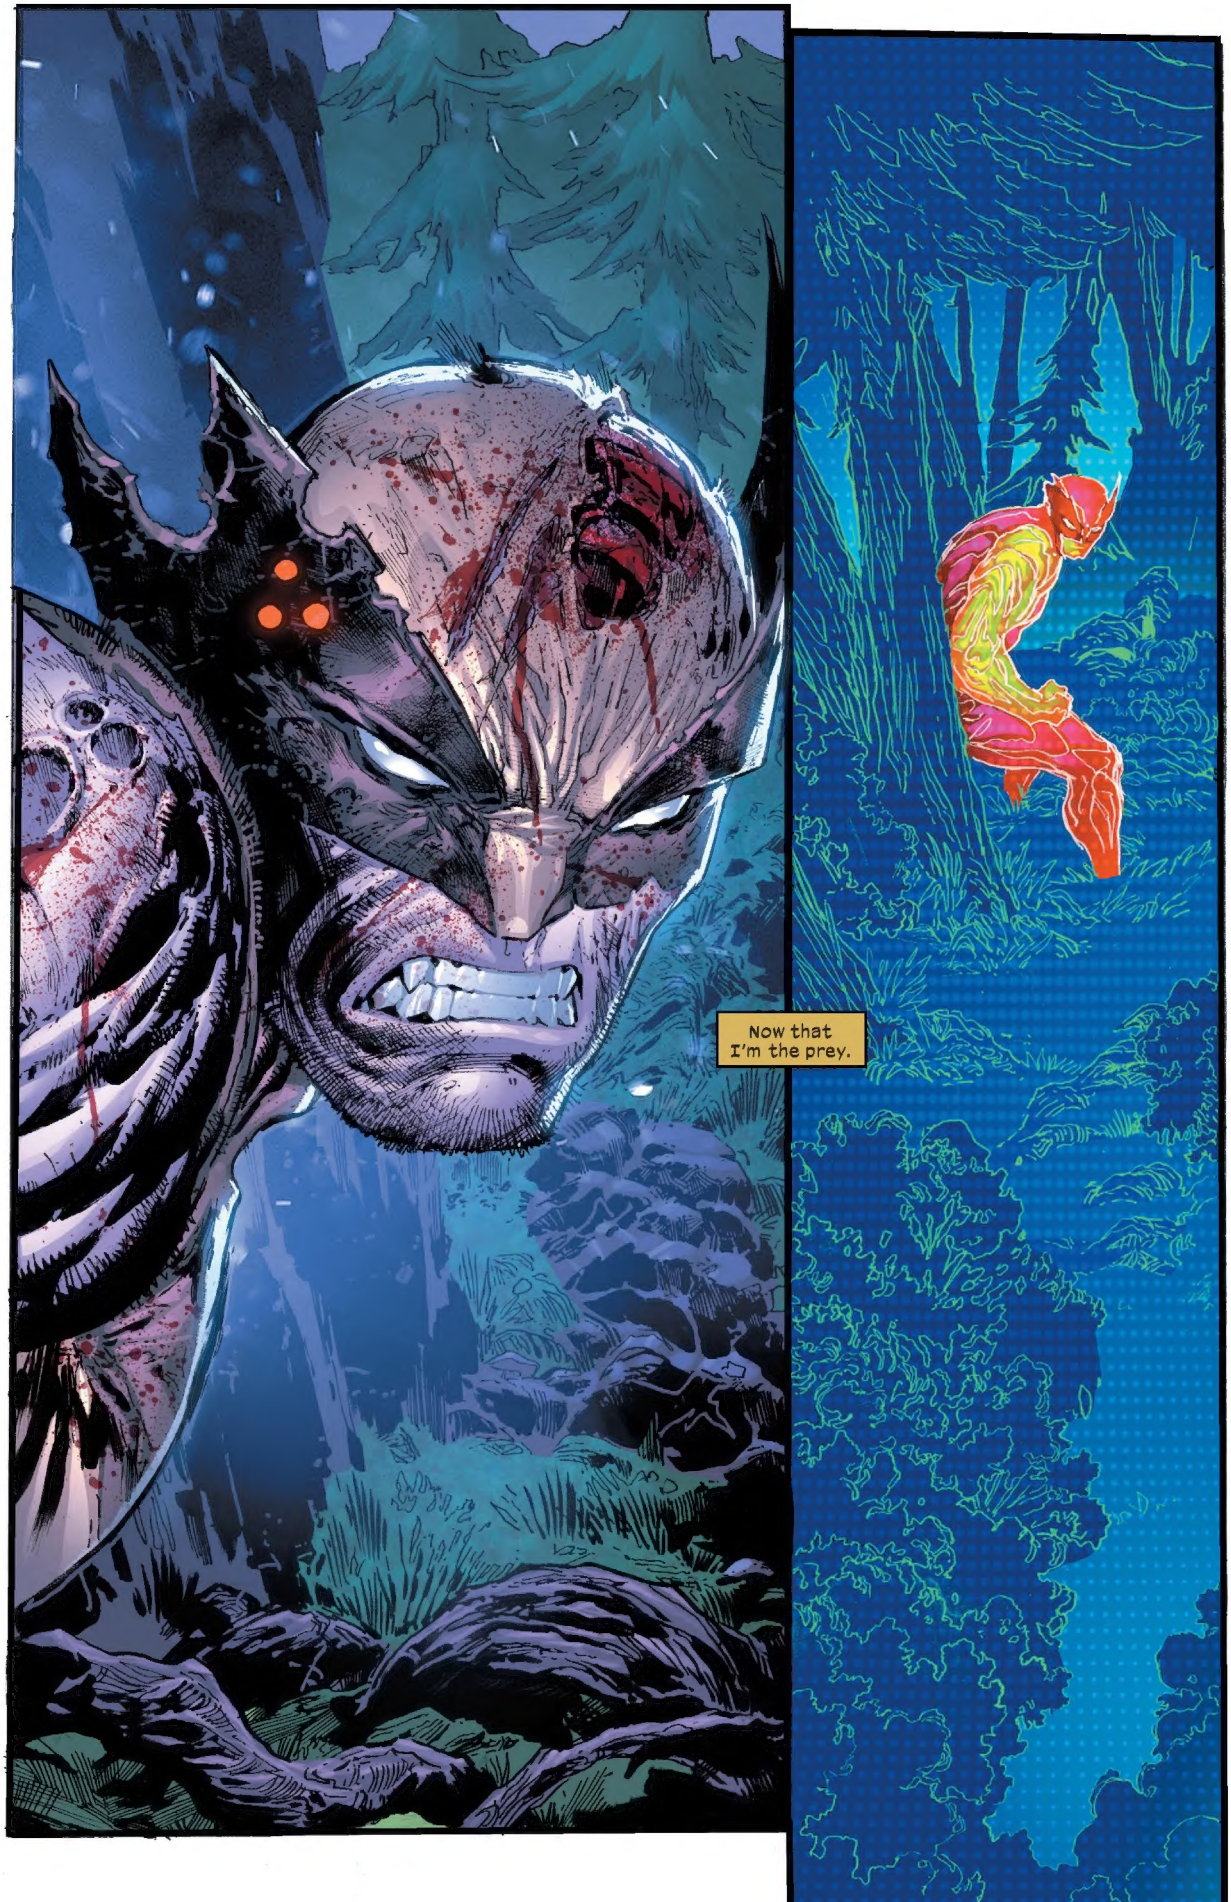
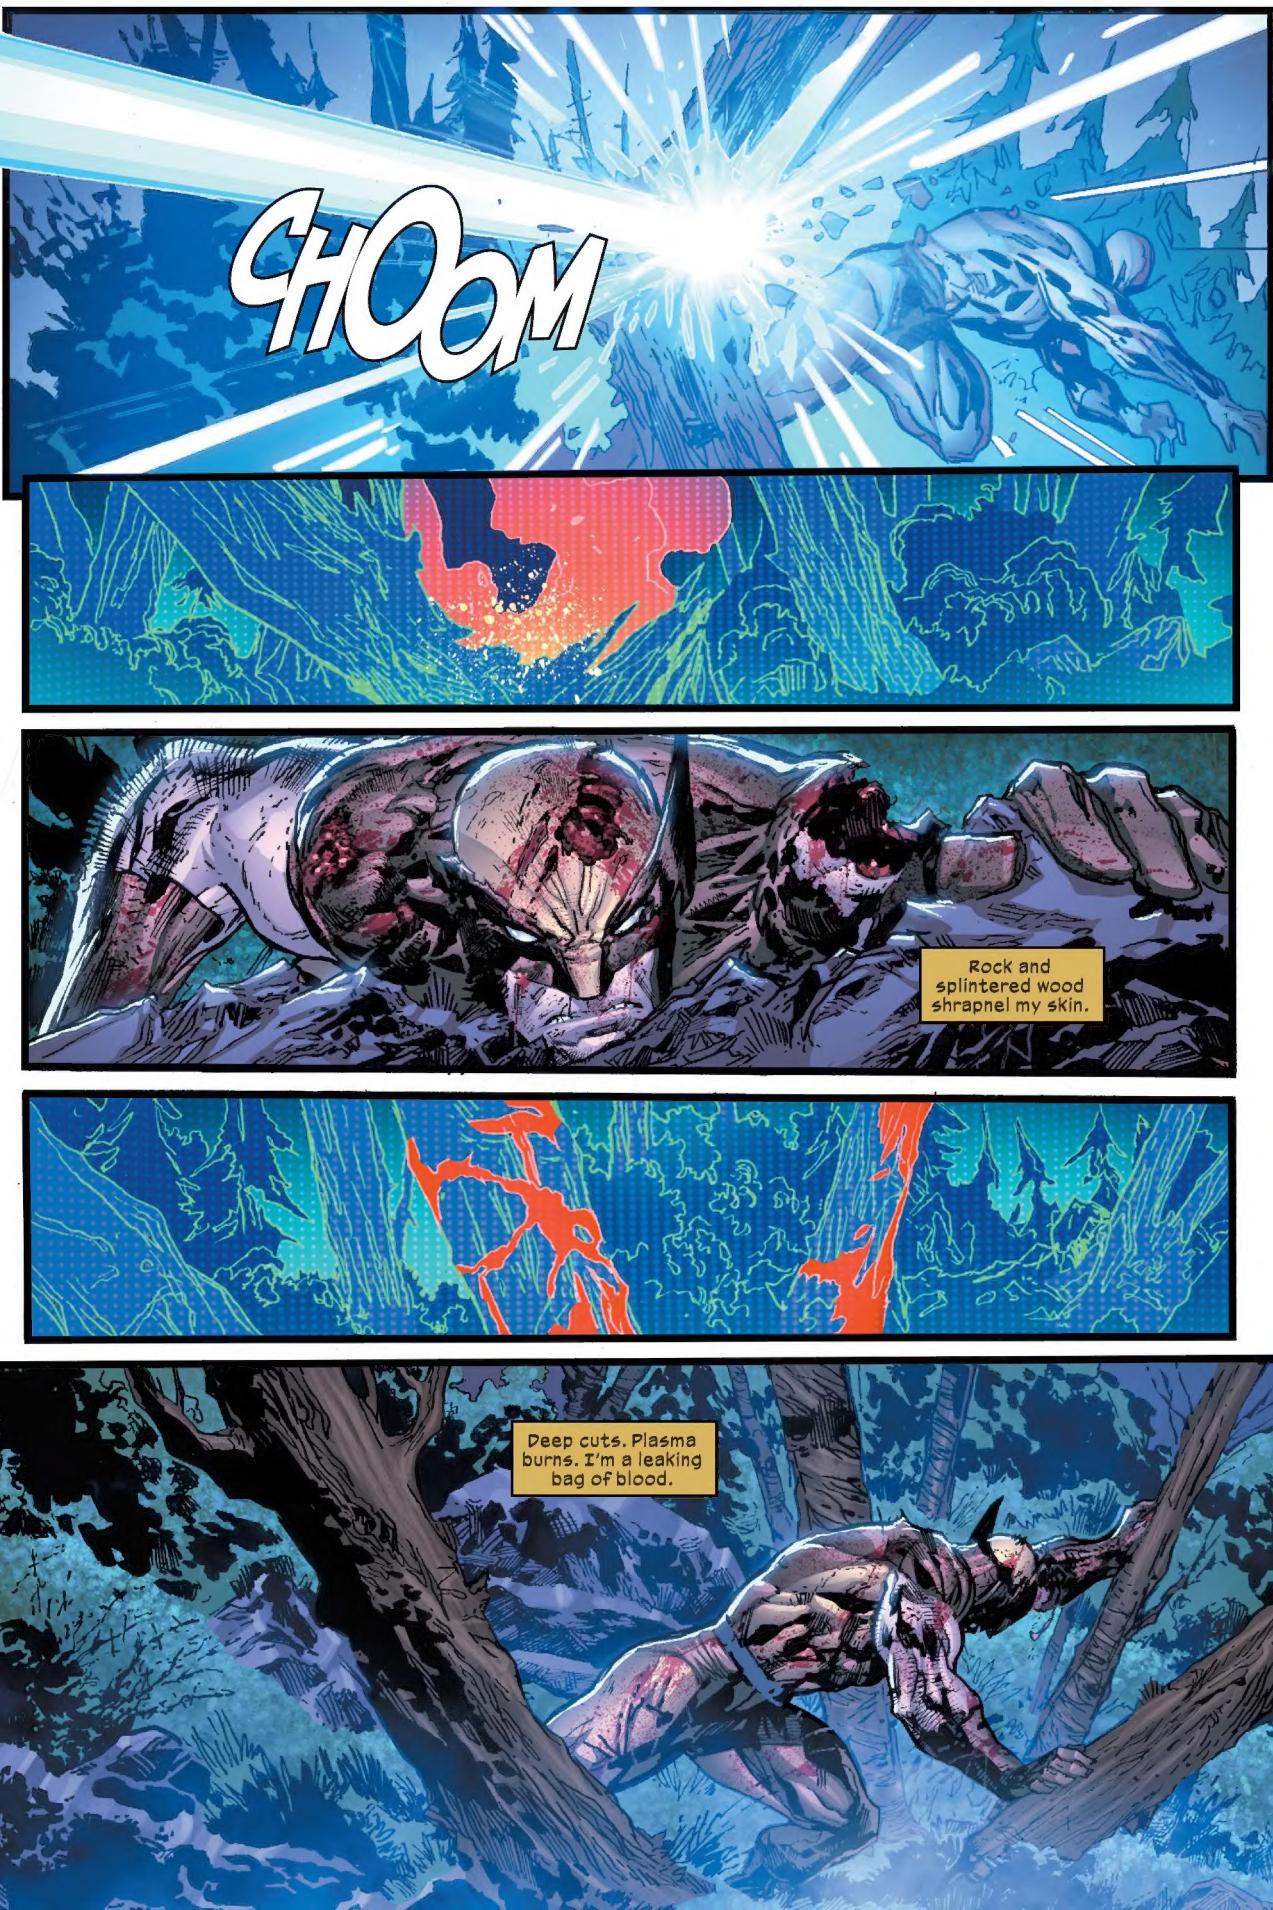
CANADA.
PRESENT DAY.
They say I'm the best there is...
...but I sure as @#%% don't feel that way.
Not now.
Now that I'm the hunted.

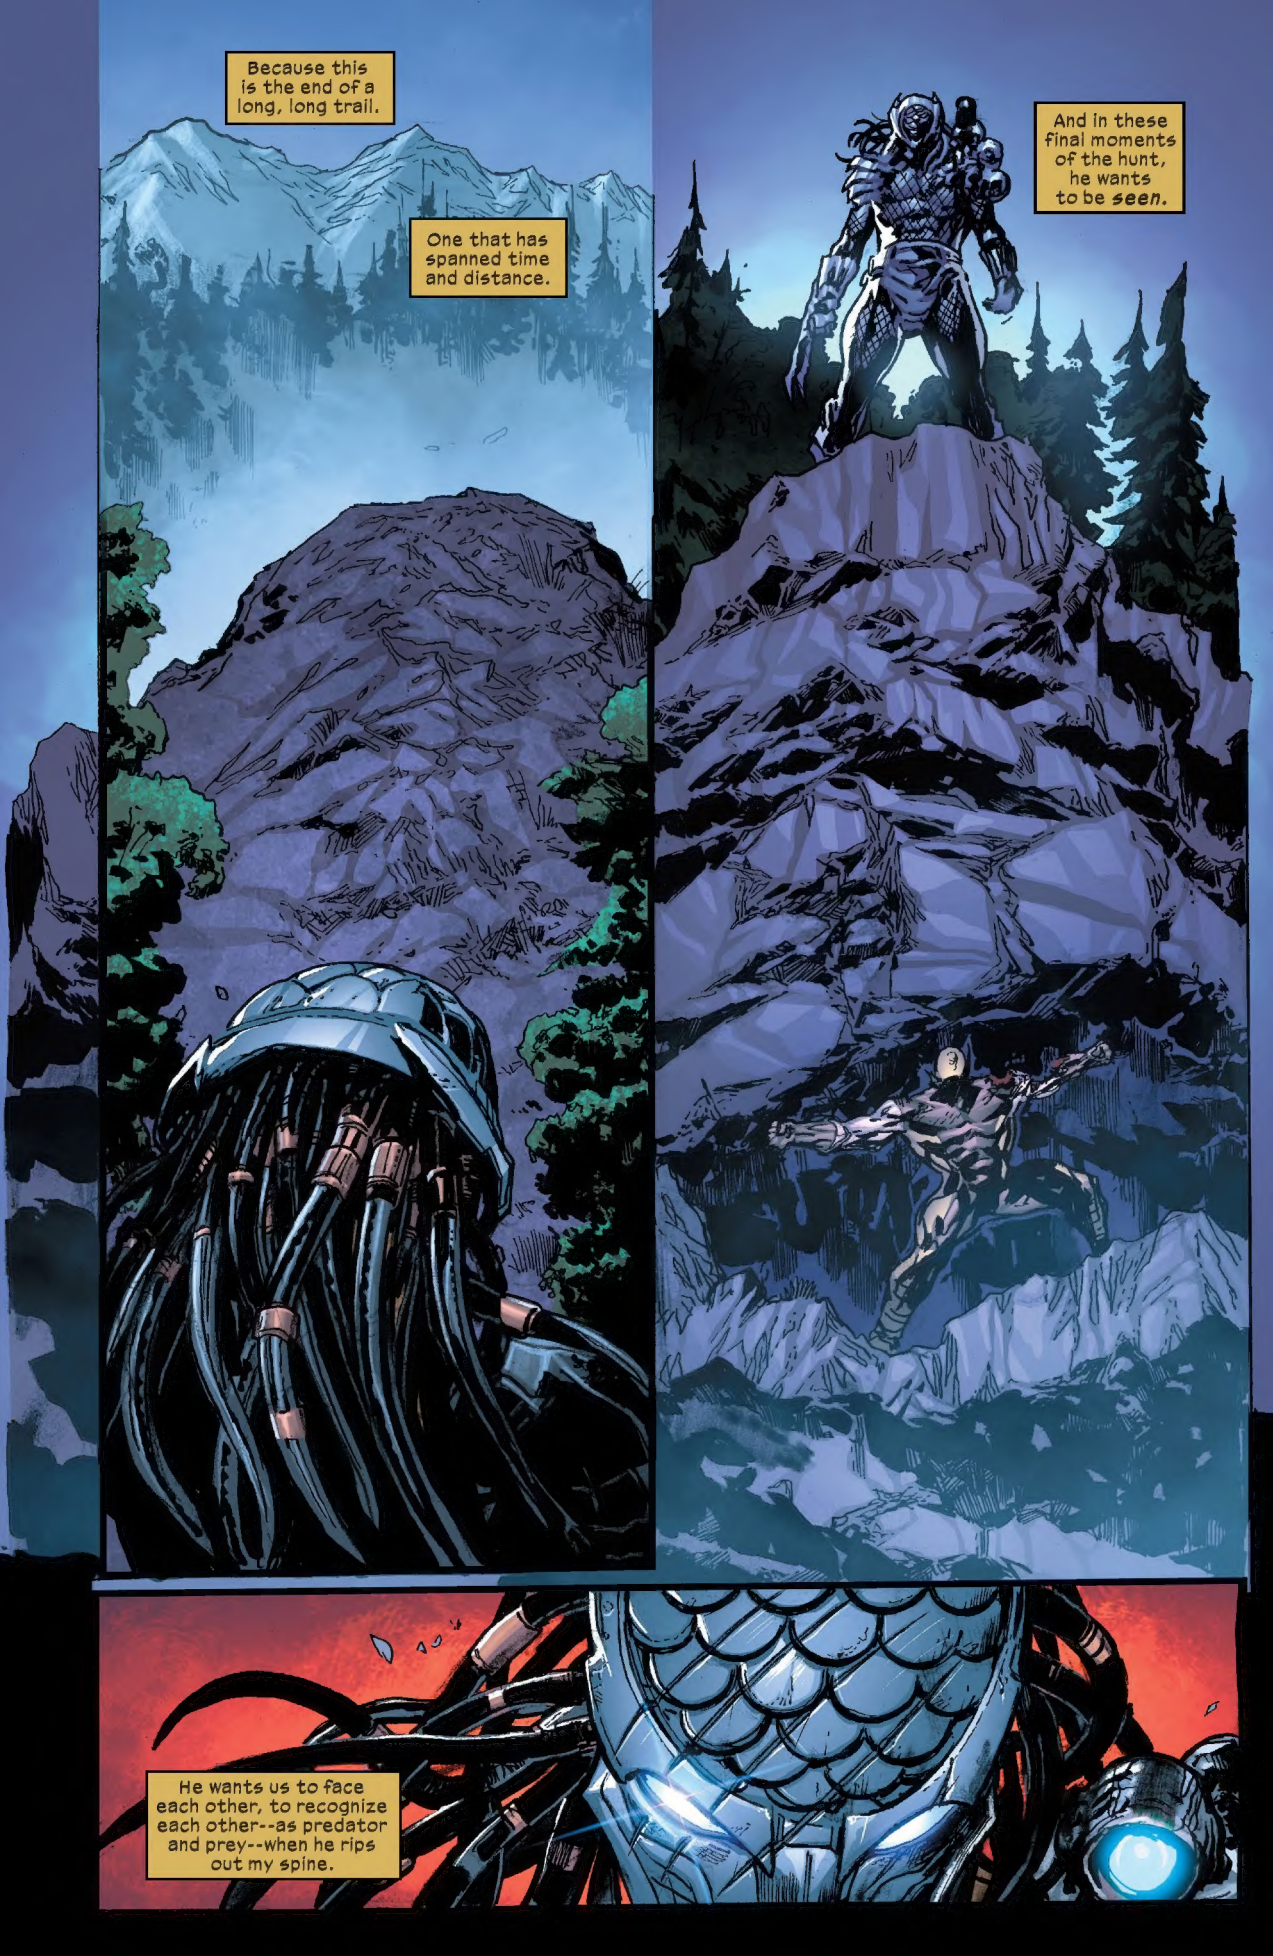


Now that I'm the prey.



CHOOM
Rock and splintered wood shrapnel my skin.
Deep cuts. Plasma burns. I'm a leaking bag of blood.

That makes me slow to run and easy to track.
When I come to the cliff...
...every nerve in my body is firing a red alert.
Way down below is a river...
...but right behind me comes a watery ripple...
SHIK
...as his cloaking device powers down.



Because this is the end of a long, long trail.
One that has spanned time and distance.
And in these final moments of the hunt, he wants to be seen.
He wants us to face each other, to recognize each other--as predator and prey--when he rips out my spine.

ALASKA TERRITORY.
CIRCA 1900.
At forty below, it took as much time for water to freeze...
KU
MCH
...as it took me to raid a beaver lodge.
Never understood the point of traps.
Because I never was good at the whole patience thing.
I could fetch a dollar per hide back then, which I suppose translates to about a hundred today.
Never cared much about the money.
Only took as much as I needed to survive, and this was the kind of work I preferred.
Lonesome work. Woods work.
Work that don't make you think too hard.

And if killing was part of it...
...I was particularly good at that.
This northern territory was a lawless frontier.
You were on your own.
That suited me fine.
I never worried too much about the subzero winds or avalanches, the pissed-off moose, the charging grizzlies.
It's people who concerned me.
Zzzz
People's why I used this cave as my safe.
This was the edge of the map, and that's where folks go to escape trouble and make more.
Zzzz
They always wanted something--money, land, sex, power--and they'd kill to get it.

Alaska might have a thousand ways to kill you, but murder was at the top of the list.
I'd rather stay away from their messy hunger.
Not out of fear, but annoyance and exhaustion.
Because anybody who came after me...
...was going to end up dead.

I could smell a storm coming. So I headed into the outpost called Scar, deep in native Athabascan country.
It was mostly populated by loggers, trappers, miners, and the few women inclined to follow them.
I avoided it, except when I needed money or supplies.
Or a drink.
There he is now.
He's the one you're looking for...
...if you want someone crazy enough for the job you're talking about.
Especially with a blizzard on the way.

What'll it be, then?
You know what I want, Nan.
This one's on me.
The next one too, how about?
He's just going to keep at it, so you know.
If that's the case--then how about the bottle?
We'll share it!

Now hold on.
I only want a moment of your time.
You'd be smart to stay clear of me.
And why is that?
Because things are about to get ugly.
Assuming he makes it through the storm, trade representative should be here tomorrow...
...But this one already knows that. This one's always got a big pile of somethings to sell.

Tucker said he was a prospector who had made it big.
A crew of rivals had kidnapped his son, hoping for a ransom.
He was supposed to meet them in Scar in a few days' time for the exchange...
...but he had it on good authority they were holed up in the old Groff hunting cabin ten miles north.
Rough country was made rougher by the storm.
But he insisted we carry on.
Maybe that's one of the reasons I said yes.
He wanted his son back desperately.
I've always been--and I'll always be--kind of raw and messed-up...

What spooked them?
Do you see something? What's wrong?

It was a slaughterhouse in the woods.
And the Athabascans were among the dead.
My god...
I-it was them, I tell you! It was the men we're after!
It must have been...
They're killers.
They're monsters!

The Athabascans were the only folks around here I actually liked.
They taught me how to forage, and I thanked them with the occasional slab of venison or cut of salmon.
They lived in harmony with nature, whereas everybody else seemed to come here to gobble up whatever they could...
...to cut a forest down to sawdust, to tear up the hills and rivers for gold.
To kill and butcher.
Looks like the bad weather's on our side. They haven't posted a watch.
Be swift, my friend. And show no mercy!

Well, I suppose they're all my boys...in a way.
They were all scamps and orphans like you.
I hired them on to do jobs for me.
Nothing like that nasty bit of business in the woods. That was some enterprising freelancer...
...but I did commission a railroad robbery from them.
The pay car contained twenty thousand in cash and bonds.

But they decided they didn't need me.
So I've decided I no longer need them.

It's easy to forget pain when your wounds heal like dried-up creeks.
What I didn't realize, not until many years later...

SOUTH AMERICA. MANY YEARS AGO.
When you've lived as long and as hard as I have...

There are times I can remember as clear as a picture.
There are other times that feel like I'm looking at myself through the wrong end of a telescope.
And there are other times that are gone altogether.
Because of Professor Thorton.

Everything was sleepy and quiet at dawn.

Below is a fall of two hundred feet or so.
Above me, somewhere, is the hunter who comes from the stars.

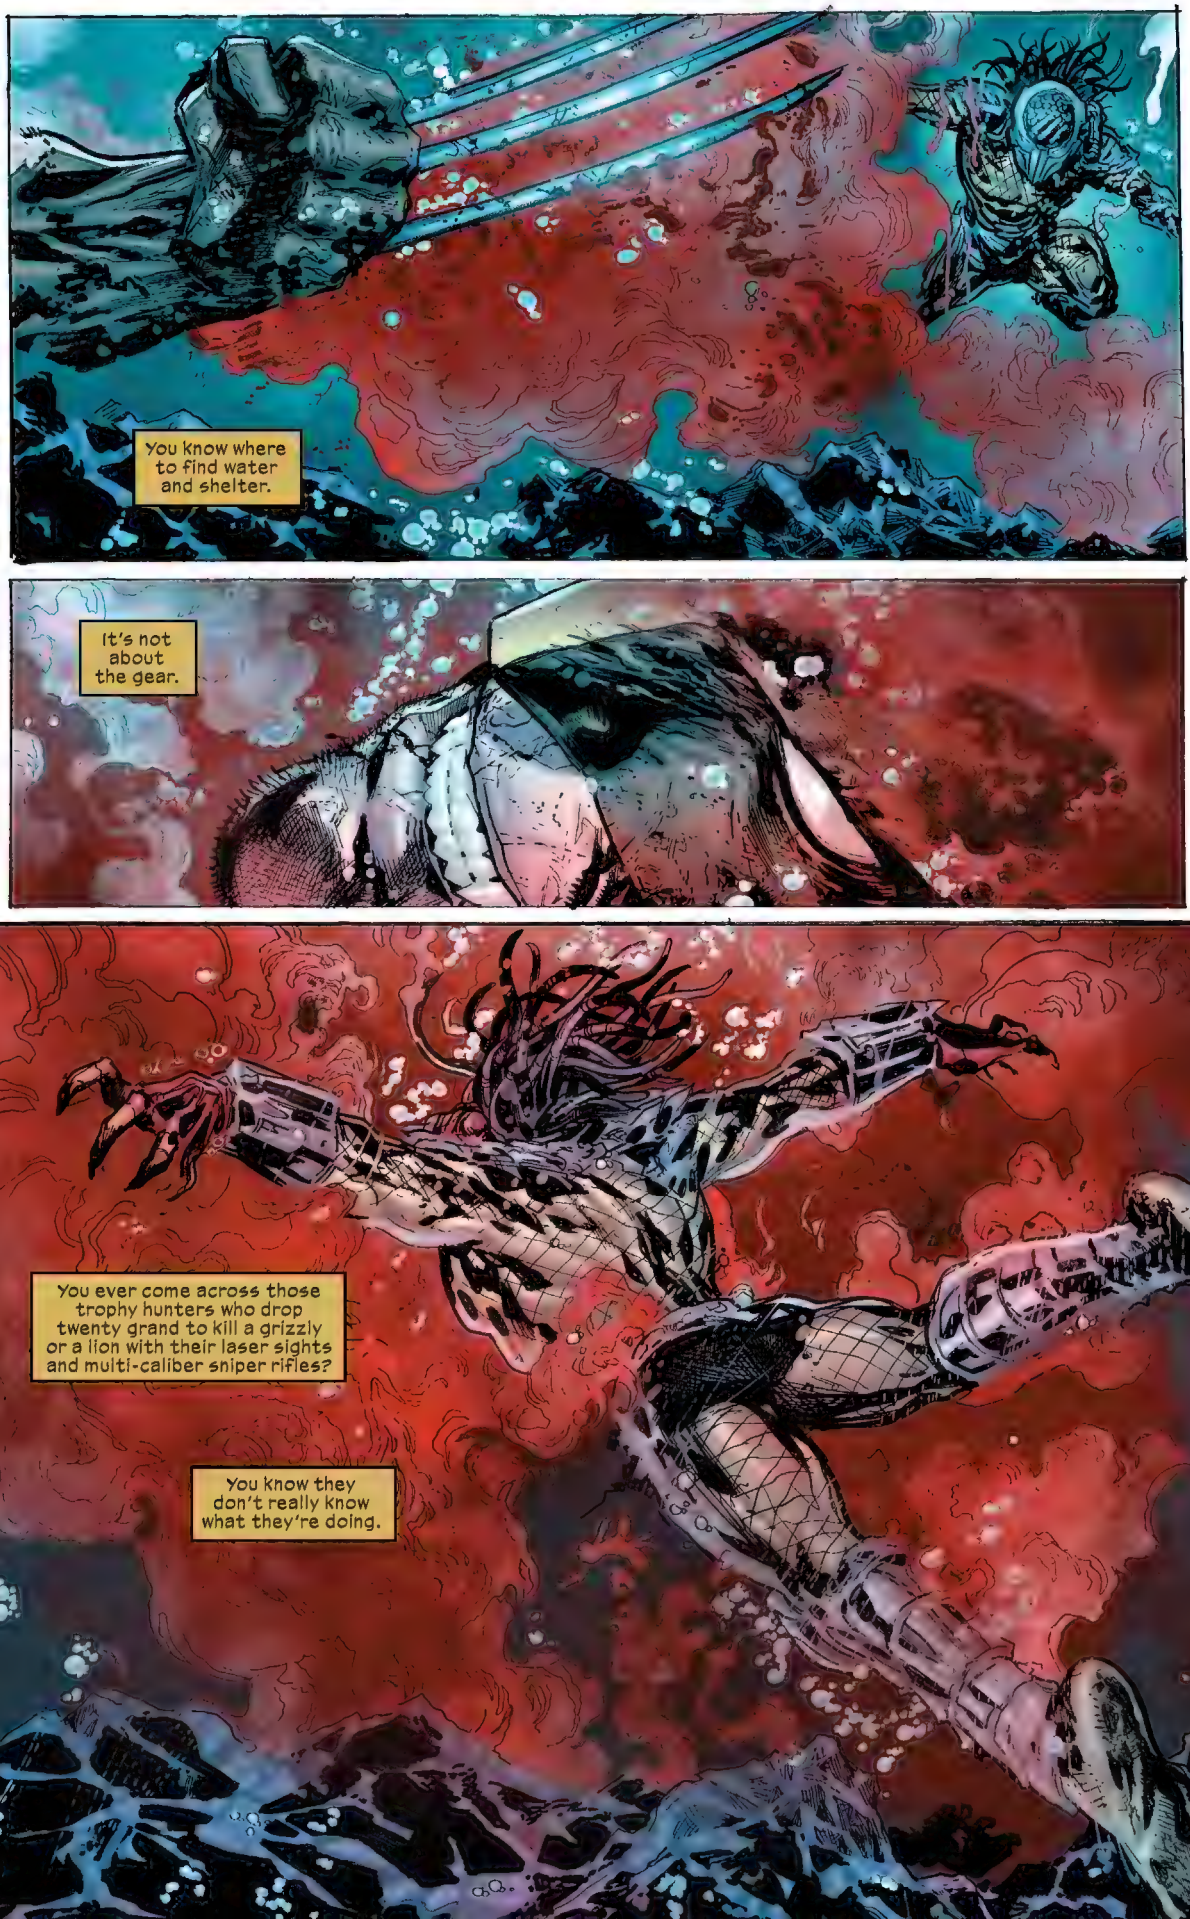
Hunting is elemental.
You study dirt for tracks and spoor.
You stay downwind.
You note what's growing or hatching or breeding.



You know where to find water and shelter.
It's not about the gear.
You ever come across those trophy hunters who drop twenty grand to kill a grizzly or a lion with their laser sights and multi-caliber sniper rifles?
You know they don't really know what they're doing.

The fancier the tech, the cockier you get...
...and the more detached you are from the musk and bloodbeat of the thing you want dead.

But there are some things beyond their reach and reckoning.

We were both in a bad way.
But things were about to get much worse.

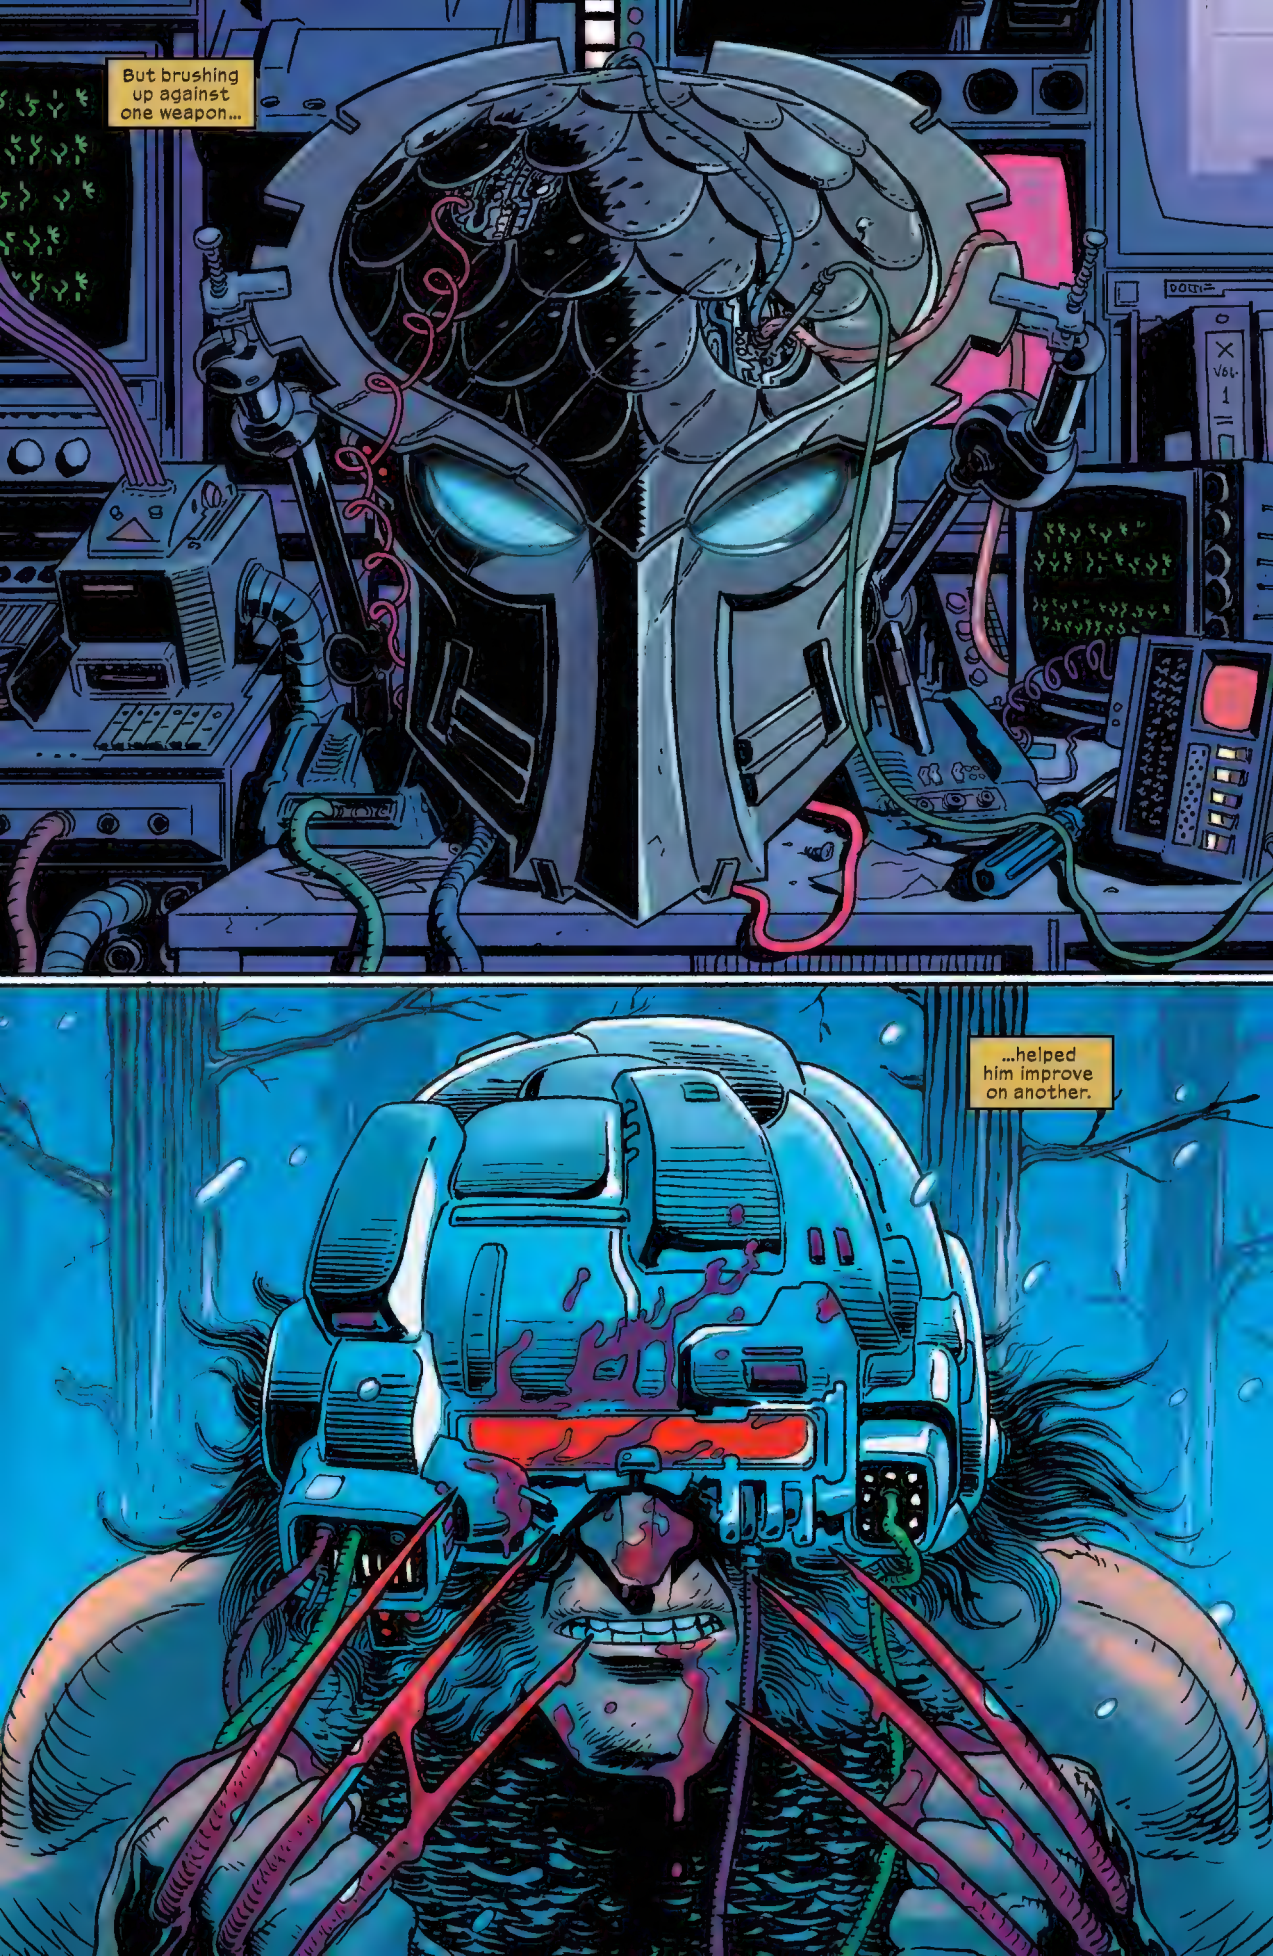
I'll pass along the coordinates of the impact site.

But whatever it is...
...there's not going to be much of it left.

Whatever weapons Professor Thorton built in this world...
...could not compare to the horrifying advancements of space.



But brushing up against one weapon...
...helped him improve on another.

ONE WEEK AGO.
Spent a lot of time trying to figure out my broken history.
My skin might be clean of injury, but my brain is a gummed-up mess of scar tissue from mindwipes and memory plants.
Sometimes, I go back to places half-remembered or forgotten entirely. To try to shake loose some rust.
That includes the ruins of the Weapon X lab.
In a lead-lined vault, in a lead-lined container...
...I found this.

I figured, if I unshelled it, it would only be a matter of time.
He would come.
And this time, I would set the terms of our engagement.
We would end this hunt where it began.
In the wild North.
Where the only law is that of tooth and claw.

He believed that one day I would become his strongest sword.

BAMF
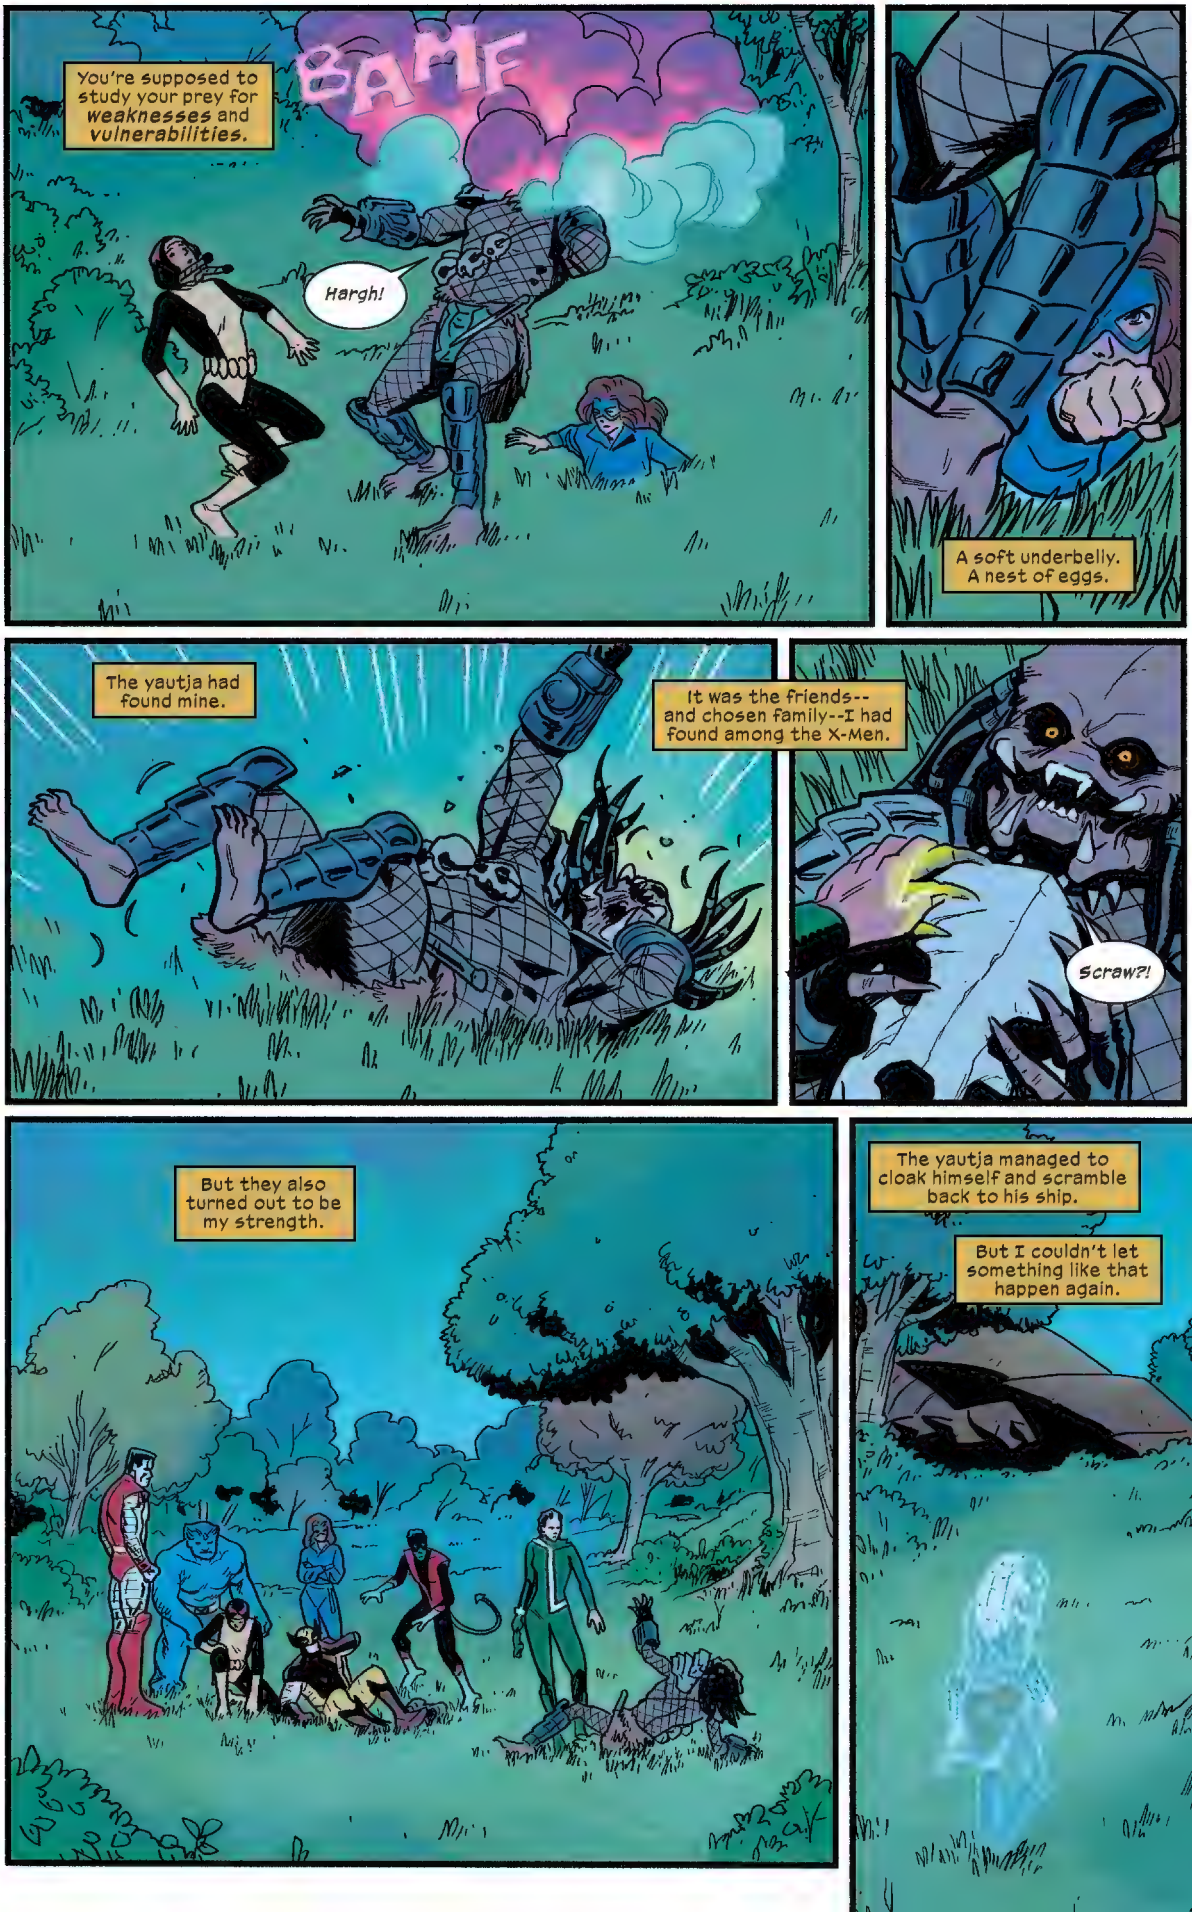
...you don't have to do this alone.
I don't want your help, Nightcrawler.
This just proves what I always knew.
I shouldn't be here.
Logan!
Rogue?! That you?!
Logan, what should I do?

Nothing.
You should do nothing.
SNAKT
I can touch him. If I take off my gloves and touch him, I can--
NO!
You've got me, okay?
Just don't hurt her.
Don't hurt anyone else.
You've got me.
THUNK

I hadn't given up.
But I'd given up fighting him here.
We could take this to the stars, as far away from these kids as possible.
Hey, bub.
SNIKT
SNIKT
You sure you got the right guy?
I'm double the trouble.
Dani! You shouldn't have-- nngh.
Ack-- ack!
You shouldn't have come.
Guten tag!
BAMF
SPFFFF



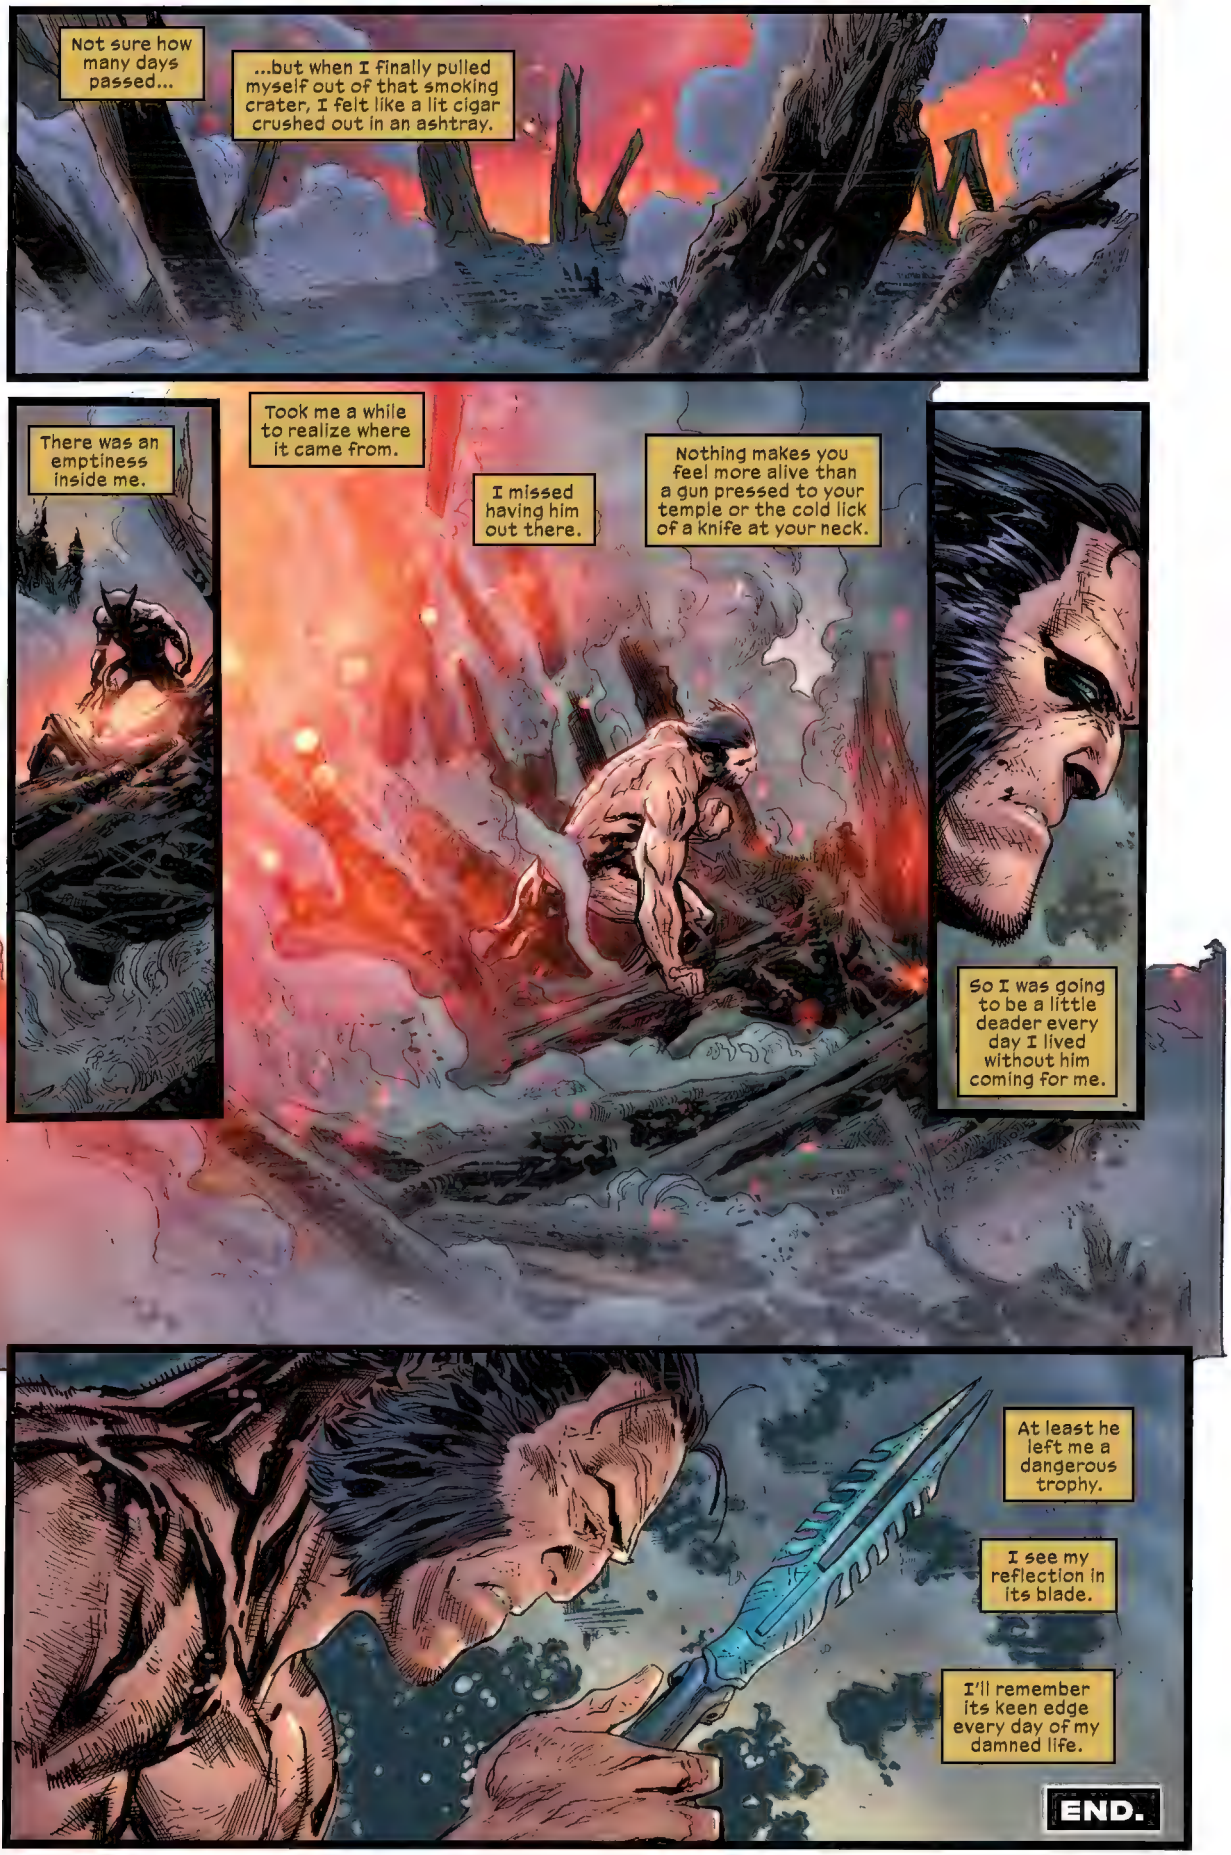
You're supposed to study your prey for weaknesses and vulnerabilities.
BAMF
Hargh!
A soft underbelly. A nest of eggs.
The yautja had found mine.
It was the friends--and chosen family--I had found among the X-Men.
Screw?!
But they also turned out to be my strength.
The yautja managed to cloak himself and scramble back to his ship.
But I couldn't let something like that happen again.

PRESENT DAY.
CANADA.
So I lured him back to a place where it would just be the two of us.
The river is where I would make my last stand.
The good mud waited for us here.
A dog can smell 100,000 times better than a human.
Bees can see ultraviolet light. Birds can sense magnetic fields.
I'd observed the yautja long enough to know he registered heat signatures.
The mud was my primitive version of a cloaking device.
I gave him a blind eye.

When I leaped down on him then...
...it was with the gravity of a hundred years of war.
I admired him as much as I hated him.
SHIK
SHAK
I imagine the feeling was mutual.
ZZT
He cooked me with a few thousand volts...
...and whipped out what looked like a ceremonial dagger to finish the job.

I let him make a sheath of me.
We would end this eye to eye...
...tasting the blood in each other's breath.
For a fatal moment, we were one and the same.
I thought that was the end.
But he refused to die on my terms.
I didn't recognize the numbers, but I knew a countdown when I saw one.

He was going to get that trophy, even if he claimed it in his grave.
But here's the thing about desire.
Once you get what you want, you realize that wanting was the real pleasure.
So in those final bloody seconds, when the hunt finally ended...
...I hope he felt a century of disappointment slam into his heart.
KRAKOOM



Not sure how many days passed...
...but when I finally pulled myself out of that smoking crater, I felt like a lit cigar crushed out in an ashtray.
There was an emptiness inside me.
Took me a while to realize where it came from.
I missed having him out there.
Nothing makes you feel more alive than a gun pressed to your temple or the cold lick of a knife at your neck.
So I was going to be a little deader every day I lived without him coming for me.
At least he left me a dangerous trophy.
I see my reflection in its blade.
I'll remember its keen edge every day of my damned life.
END.
